

POSTAL CHOICE UP TO LEADERS

Commission May Change Its Mind as Calling for a New Examination of Rock Island.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Congressman William J. Graham may visit Rock Island shortly to make a personal inquiry into the postmaster's situation there as a result of the failure of the civil service commission to report favorably on the appointment of the Republican candidate for the place.

Mr. Graham has indicated since the commission's report that he may change his mind about calling a new examination, but would rather go over the ground at Rock Island in person before coming to a decision. The purpose of his trip there would be to confer with Republican leaders and with prominent business men with a view of getting their opinions on suitable postmaster candidates.

While he has not changed his mind regarding Postmaster Harry P. Simpson, whom he is not inclined to reappoint, for political reasons, it is probable that he will discuss Simpson as well as other possibilities if he goes to Rock Island. Mr. Simpson was the only one of three candidates to be reported as an eligible for the appointment by the civil service commission, and therefore holds a disadvantage over the others. It is reported on reliable authority that Mr. Simpson is still hopeful of securing a Re-election. But it is this year that the civil service commission must make its decision. It will take much of Republican party resources in Rock Island and may have several names in mind while he returns to Washington.

Holds Appointment Political.

The president's order allowing a congressman to designate another or than the highest man reported on the civil service eligible list actually makes the appointment a political matter. Mr. Graham declared today. "The civil service examination merely narrows down the field to three eligibles. It does not select the postmaster."

Congressman Graham has not decided when he will visit Rock Island, if he should conclude to make a personal reconnaissance there. January will be a busy month in Washington and his duties will

WARRIORS TELL COME HERE AFTER HIS WIFE, JANE
His departing around the premises of the Park Avenue Pharmacy.

Two men, at 10 o'clock last night, entered the office of Arthur H. Miller, by Officer William H. Miller. Miller said he was searching for his wife, but talked at giving further facts, leading to the belief on the officer's part that the man was in that neighborhood on his legitimate errand. He was locked up as a vagrant, his case to be investigated today.
